Yoram Naveh, CEO of Clal Holdings

“First quarter results, and mainly the high growth rates in the Company’s core products and the execution of steps to cut costs constitute a positive turn around in Clal’s business profile, both in relation to the corresponding period last year and in relation to the results of the entire sector. These results reflect the implementation of a three-year strategic plan that was introduced at the end of 2019. The plan is based on growth on the one hand and on cost cutting on the other hand. The Company’s new business lines achieve consistent growth, including in the field of finance – which was focused upon in the Company’s strategic plan. The Company doubled its growth rates in terms of premiums and contributions. Moreover, Clal Insurance and Finance presents one of the highest growth rates in the entire sector – app. 15%.

The application of the Capital Markets, Insurance and Saving Authority’s circular regarding the provision with respect to the liability adequacy test has impacted the 2019 results of operations. A significant post tax NIS 427 million increase was recorded in comprehensive income. This increase was partially offset the impact of the unusual cut of interest rates in 2019. Accordingly, post tax comprehensive income in 2019 amounts to app. NIS 89 million, compared with a comprehensive loss of app. NIS 338 million that was reported at the time. Furthermore, this application had a positive impact on the Company’s equity, which amounted to app. NIS 5.2 billion at the end of the first quarter of 2020 and reflects the Company’s financial stability.

Clal Insurance and Finance has made preparations to stress scenarios in the economy and was therefore well prepared to react immediately to the COVID-19 crisis. This enabled the continuity of ongoing work processes and comprehensive application of working from home plan. During the COVID-19 crisis, the Company provided its customers with uninterrupted and high-quality service to its customers and business partners. It offered a variety of reliefs and benefits that will make things easier for its customers. During the COVID-19 crisis, the Company implemented streamlining measures, including cutting executives’ pay and adjusting the workforce to the reduced activity. The Company takes measures to reduce further costs. In the opinion of Company’s management, total estimated savings in respect of general and administrative expenses as a result of these changes amounted to app. NIS 60 million in 2020. This decrease will mainly be reflected starting with the second quarter.
